Dear Jarved: -

I

have enclosed in this mailing two more packages of videos pertaining to Champ and those directly/indirectly connected to the subject. Animal X tv series had my friend Richard Smith on an show on lake monsters, and his scene was on Champ, while nearby Boisvert was on Memphre. Also, I located an Canadian video that was compiled from one-half from an old Arthur C. Clarke's British tv series, MYSTERIOUS WORLD, and some new footage on Memphre.

In our telephone discussion I mention America's foremost cryptid researcher,, Loren Coleman, who I know and which I was very surprise you were unaware of (go on the web, and see how many sites he is listed, he has his own web site one can contact him by) and gives a quick preview of him.

I am locating a few more videos that pertains to Champ, which should exhaust my video library on the subject. Hope this is of some help to past documentary filmmakers on the subject and how they handle the topic good and bad!

I also don't know if this is of some help, but my French contact in Europe sent me an French tv video which due to the different tv scanning system, won't play on my VCR and I think he mention that the video had some American lake monsters on it that was shown on this French documentary on "monsters". Unfortunately, the only place around here that can rescan it into the American system wanted a small fortune to do so - and I am uncertain as to what is on it. If you can rescan it into the American, I would be happy to loan you my original copy to work with.

One more thing, I assume (?) that Doug Hajicek did sent you a copy of what I had sent him of my 4-part article on Champ that I had published in an mollusc(!) journal in 1995? That article would be of help to you regarding Champ's controversy.

If I can be of further help, let me know.

Sincerel

Dear Mr. Reitan:-

The above mailing address was stated on your website on the forgotten early history of color television development immediately after the post-WW II era, if anyone wishes to contact you on this topic.

On your website, you had a segment that covers the period of time when the rival CBS color television system was being broadcasted regularly from June-October 1951 from New York City. This is a period of time that I am specifically interested in because it pertains to a research project that I am currently undertaking, and which you may be the only person who can still answer many questions about it.

I have consulted contemporary newspapers, weekly magazines, and especially the monthly Popular Science/Popular Mechanics/Science & Mechanics/Mechanic Illustrated for 1950/51 on the introduction of CBS color television system. However, I should specified that I am primary interested in one 1951 CBS regularly color broadcasted show because of the individual who hosted the show.

The show was called, THE WORLD IS YOURS, and was hosted by wildlife naturalist and author, Ivan T. Sanderson. From my research it has reveal that Ivan Sanderson made color television history as being the first host of a regular broadcasted color tv series. And that his color program series ran for a total of 69 shows from June-September 1951, Monday-Friday from 4:30-5:00 p.m.
His time slot was then replaced with the color tv variety show hosted by Mel Torme for about 3 weeks before the CBS color system ceased.

I am doing a biography on Ivan Sanderson's life and numerous achievements, and was totally surprised that he had a color tv series in 1951. The few remaining persons who knew Sanderson informed me that he had never told them he had hosted this color tv show at all, and could not answer any questions at all about the show or its series of programs. And importantly, why would he get involved in such a television project, considering that at best, only about 1,000 CBS color adapted television sets, mostly made by do-it-yourselfers, could view his show in color. Further inquiry on my part to the Museum of Television and Radio history in New York City reveal that their data base of early surviving television shows, do not have any kinescope black and white copies of this show surviving.

on these 1920s & 30s Commander Dyott's wildlife films? Especially SAVAGE GOLD, which is considered his best and most controversial documentary?

In addition, 30 years later, producer Commander Dyott adventures would be re-created in a "doco-drama" motion picture from Warner Brothers studios in 1958 under the title: MANHUNT IN THE JUNGLE. The producer of the film was Cedric Francis and directed by Tom McGowan. The film was not a success, critical or financial, when it was released.

Do you have any background information on this obscure 1958 Warner Brothers doco-drama?

An additional inquiry on my part would be on an motion picture that was a semi-fiction version of these exploitive documentaries of that time.

This was the original 1931 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature film, TRADER HORN, that starred Harry Carry, as the African explorer. This early sound film would now be considered politically incorrect in its depiction of the native people. Its importance as a comparison to the independently made documentaries versus the leading motion picture studio at that time.

I am especially interested if you may possess a copy of the privately printed book on the behind the scenes adventures of the TRADER HORN filming crew, written by the film's director: HORNING INTO AFRICA by W.S. Van Dyke (1931), privately printed.

And especially the series of newspaper articles written by John McClain, who was a ship news reporter for the defunct, THE NEW YORK SUN newspaper of New York City. Briefly, McClain accompanied the TRADER HORN filming crew for six months and had sent a series of articles to the newspaper, THE SUN, on the adventures of their African location filming. This would be circa May 1929 to October (?) 1929 (the dates may be slightly in error).

If your library does have any background information on these two separate requests (producer George M. Dyott and the 1931 film, TRADER HORN), please inform me as to the cost of copying and postage.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Houston: -

I was recommended to contact you by the Martin & Osa Johnson Safari Museum (copy of their reply enclosed). This was due to an inquiry I had made to their archives pertaining to the Johnson's connections with Arthur B. Sanderson and his son, Ivan Terence Sanderson over a three decade period of time.

I am in the process of researching the history of [AD] naturalist/writer Ivan T. Sanderson (1911-1973) for a biography on him and his achievements, especially during the years of 1946-circa 1960 which is not at all well documented of what he was doing both professional and personally.

Only recently I was able to obtain the newspaper morgue clipping file on Sanderson from the now defunct New York Herald-Tribune newspaper Among their clippings was a 1953 article on one of television personalities of that time (copy of article enclosed).

This 1953 mini-biography of Sanderson refered to his contact with the Johnsons' and their wildlife films.

Ivan was hired to review the Johnsons's film to be re-edited into the Olsa Johnson's wildlife series, "The Big Game Hunt" and by chance, had watched the film that was taken by the Johnsons that showed his father, Arthur B., being attacked and seriously injured by a charging rhino. Ivan's father died Smetime after this chino attack, but the details are conflicting and sketchy.

However Ivan refered that this film segment of the rhino attack was incorporated into the 1928 film, "Simba". But the Johnsons's museum informed me that this segment was not included in the restored 90 minute video version of this documentary. Referring to the 1928 New York Times motion picture adds index of this documentary, it was "proclaimed 4 years to make. 2

I had reach a completed dead-end of locating any further information on Sanderson's color tv series when I came across your unique website on color television developmental history. If anyone may know any further information on this 1951 color program nature series, it would possibly be you. My inquiry to you is this: do you possess any information on THE WORLD IS YOURS show that I may be able to obtain copies of for my research on this aspect of his life?

If you do not have such information, could you suggest where I may be able to further inquire on this topic? I have consulted the CBS retired engineers website and did come across one brief humerous account about Sanderson's show from one retired engineer of the era. However, any surviving CBS tv engineers would be very small in number that I could try to contact today.

If I may also ask permission at this time, could I be allowed to included a color print out from your website on the 1951 CBS color signal logo that was taken from a slide from one of your contacts, and the picture of the only surviving 1951 CBS color tv consul?

I have enclosed an SASE for your reply at your leisure in regards to my lengthly letter.

Sincerely,
Gary S. Mangiacopra

This 1953 mini-biography of Sanderson referred to his contact with the Johnsons' and their wildlife films.

The Johnson's museum archives informed me that in 1996/98 they were contacted by you, and that you were also the editor of the tv syndicated Big Game Hunt series. My inquiry to you is several fold:

- 1) Does this circa 1952 26-part syndicated tv series still exist? Or is it like many other early syndicated series from television golden age have been lost forever due to no one interested in the topic and by sheer neglect?
- 2) If this series still does exist, are any copies of the ½ hour show available for viewing? Possibly in the archives of the Museum of Television and Radio history in New York City?
- 3) It was referred [book: They Married Adventure-Lives of Martin and Olsa Johnson (1992)] that Ivan Sanderson had narrated some (all?) of these ½ hour shows. Is this correct? And if so, how many of the shows did he do a voiceover?

4) According to the 1953 interview, Ivan had actually helped edited some of the Johnson's footage. Plus additional footage of his personal zoo animals were taken and included into the separate ½ hour shows. Is this correct also?

5) Regarding the chance incident of a random can of film being looked at and being revealed that it showed film of Ivan's father being killed by the rhino incident. Do you recall anything about this incident, and did it happen as it was claimed to be? A sheer chance coincidence?

6) Did you have any personal contact with Ivan Sanderson, and do you recall anything at all about him? I have been able to locate several persons who had met Sanderson personally (even just once) and they have related their memories of him as an individual.

This is an important project of mine, as these people are of an advance age and I am trying to obtain what they recall to preserve their information before it is lost forever.

It is hope that you maybe able to help with background information to the above series of questions of mine on the biography of Ivan Sanderson's life. I have enclosed an SASE for your reply at your leisure. If you are unable to help in this matter, it would be appreciated if you could suggest to me where I maybe able to further inquire upon the matter of this forgotten wildlife tv series.

DATE: 10 June 2005

TIME: 4:15-4:18 P.M.

TOPIC: Olsa Johnson's circa 1952 syndicated tv series - THE BIG GAME HUNT

I talk with Lester Becker (see 3 May 2005 reply from the Johnson's Safari Museum in Kansas) who is in his 70s and still live in Connecticut (but not to the then address in Westport, Connecticut), but whose telephone number was still valid.

I briefly discuss with Lester Becker of his involvement with this circa 1952 tv series. Unfortunately, he informed me that he did not recall anything after half-a-century of passage of time. He did confirm that he did edited the Johnson's films for the 26 part-½ hour programs - - but that was all. He does NOT recall anything regarding the name of Ivan T. Sanderson and his involvement with the tv series, as Sanderson was a voice over narrator and had his jungle animals in each of the program tv shows. He just could not help at all with these 5 decades old shows.

Overall, this was another dead end on any information of what Sanderson was doing in the early 1950s. Nevertheless, I did established that I had contacte him and got the above comments.

within 30 days.

Time Too Short

Most manufacturers have replied that set designs can not be revised on short notice. Some have offered to cooperate with changed production early next year. Others have asked FCC to further study the whole color picture and there has been talk of taking the matter into the courts unless this is done. Zenith, which has headquarters in Chicago, told FCC in a statement that the proposed dual tuning switch for new sets could be put in perhaps by next May 1, but that this will add from $30 to $40 to each retail price tag.

"This is a severe penalty for the public to pay." said the company.. The switch may never be needed. At the present rate of sales, the cost to the public might be as much as 200 million dollars a year for a feature which may never be used.

Other manufacturers statements received yesterday expressed these view points:

ALEXANDER LAIN

The lure of diamonds and gold has led me-Ta 42-year-old prospector and engineer-into many a hazardous adventure. And today my wife, Vilma, and I are more at home in the vast Venezuelan jungle, or in our 60-foot thatched hut near Hacha Falls, on the Carrao River, than anywhere else on earth.

There was a time when I was a small cog in what the world calls civilization, but I chose to leave its worries and confusion 14 years ago. The Russians had just annexed Latvia, the land of my birth, and I felt that I must escape that kind of a future.

Wanting to get as far away as possible.

I headed for South America I knew a little self-taught English, but no Spanish, when I arrived there and started working on government road construction, but I pieced together such information as I could understand and soon became fascinated by stories of a vast unexplored "lost world" somewhere beyond the Orinoco River-not far from Ciudad Bolivar

Indians were persistent in their belief that evil spirits lived in the dense jungles of this land of mystery. And I sometimes heard talk of strange "monkey folk" that were supposed to exist on top of the gigantic plateaus that towered majestically over the forbidding forests I was young, then, and adventuresome, and even before I set eyes on the fabulous territory which the natives call La Gran Sabana, I began building my dream of exploring the wilderness.

I took my first step when I had an unexpected opportunity to fly over Venezuela's "lost world." We had flown over Cerro Bolivar, which is Venezuela's $500,000,000 mountain of 67 per cent pure iron ore, and left it far behind when the flat brown plains turned to jungle green and we suddenly saw dozens of solid rock mountains rising a mile high against the horizon. As we approached we could see that the timberline stopped at 3,000 feet and the sheer cliffs were appalling. We flew between two of these towering giants and I felt as if I were soaring over an awesome prehistoric world. There were Angel Falls, 15 times higher than Niagara, and one of the most spectacular features in the lost world, was discovered by flyer Jimmy Angel, after he crashed atop Devil's Mountain. deep valleys where no white man had ever set foot, uncharted lakes and rivers-and the huge streaks of white quartz on the mountain tops were a sure indication of gold. We saw Auyan-tepui, or Devil's Mountain, and on it we spotted a small plane sitting out a lonely and never-ending vigil. It was the plane of the daredevil flyer, Jimmy Angel, who has spent years soaring over South and Central America looking for lost gold. He landed his plane on Devil's Mountain back in 1937, but found that he could not take off after landing. He made a somewhat hurried survey of the spot, then he and his companions spent three weeks in a hazardous descent on the south side of the mountain. I have forgotten anything I may ever have heard of the hardships of that trip. but I will never forget Angel's words, as they've been reported to me, about what he found on that formidable pile of rock. "I saw outcroppings of gold up there so big that it drove me crazy to leave all that precious metal," he said. I put in my appearance. Brilliant red bugs sucked the juice from the base of a strange flower, a butterfly that looked like a flying turtle went by, and there were many strange small animals.

As I walked about, a terrifically hot sun beat down upon me. My boots, scraping through the surface soil, uncovered big veins of quartz-both red and white-indicating the presence of gold. And the volcanic nature of the whole mountain suggests a great wealth of diamonds.
Our food was short and a great storm threatened, so I did not remain long on top of Auyan-tepui but,
as we sped off toward home, I knew that some day
I would return.
In the meantime, great good fortune was with me in another adventure. One day last February, I met an old Indian chief who told me that his squaw was dying There was nothing the witch doctor could do to save her. I offered to see what I could do and went with the chief to his hut. The squaw had some kind of fever-I don't know what-and I offered her some of my "white magic" (atabrine tablets).
A few days later the chief visited me again. The squaw had recovered.
"Ch

66 Thief will make you rare gift," he said. "Chief will thank you for saving squaw. He will make you chief of Canaima (an area having beautiful waterfalls where only a few white men ever have set foot.)" Then he asked, "What do you want most?" I replied, "I need many eyes (dian. ds)-I need many eyes to buy white man's magic for sick Indians." The chief said he would show me where to find them and he arranged for a secret trip on which I was to accompany a party of eight Indians in two long dugouts.

We traveled four days on the river in the general direction of Devil's Mountain. Then we came to a huge gorge, a mile long, with sheer rock walls about 1,000 feet high. At the head of the gorge a waterfall spilled down over the wall, and perhaps it served as a mark of identification. At any rate, the Indians informed me that we had reached the home of many "eyes." All I had to do was look for them.

I made a brief inspection of what I believe will be the biggest diamond field ever discovered in the history of South America. But I had no equipment with me, so I left with the Indians and returned to my grass hut. There I set about making plans.

One man alone could not tap that vast diamond store. I knew that, despite the fact that I found [AD] $7,000 worth of diamonds in a single pool two years ago, and during another three months' period I collected $30,000 worth. That time I went to Caracas and lived in misery until I had spent every cent. Then I returned to the jungle and happiness.

Though I live in a Shangri-la of mineral wealth, I need money, men and machines-and most of all I need a helicopter for easy transportation. All of my prospecting, heretofore, has been of the lone-wolf type. Now I've already invited a band of scientific experts to visit the "home of the many eyes" and perhaps to venture up on top of Devil's Mountain.

Maybe they'll help me prove that my lost world is the greatest "get-rich-quick" spot on earth.

"I found an opening that led to a chimney-like cave and, after wriggling up, I called instructions to my wife, Vilma, on the ledge below, to follow me."

Dear Gary,

Have you heard of a new movie called "A Series of Unfortunate Events"? That rather describes a large part of the past 6 months or so and accounts for my being a lousy correspondent. Have had trouble making editor deadlines and personal mail has suffered as a consequence. sigh But as you have noted already, I have kept an eye out for stuff that I thought would interest you. By chance, I got 2 copies of the View Master article; perhaps you have a VM correspondent who would like the spare. The big cat stuff is from a local paper which son Steve in Australia gets. Hasn't been much recently about the cat. Maybe now that it is summer there, it is holing up except at night when it is cooler for hunting.

As for 'Trader Hornee' . oh my. When I saw you mention that movie, I was almost 100% sure it was porn. After a bit of chasing about on the web, I found the enclosure. I think you can cross it off your list as, perhaps, some of your other correspondents have already told you. As for the real Trader Horn movie, there were two: 1931 with Harry Carey and 1973 with Rod Taylor. According to Leonard Maltin's 2001 Movie and Video Guide, the 1931 film is on VHS but the remake is not. Your library should have a more recent Maltin [or some other video guide] with more up to date info. By now it might be on DVD. The library might also help on the Dyott chase.

Now, backing up to your 1 Aug letter which has been gathering dust. I knew Sanderson, tho not all that well. I think I may still have a small file of our correspondence. He wrote the introduction to my S.F. UFO anthology back in 1968 or thereabouts. He also visited me once in Bloomfield, passing thru Ct on his way home from some sort of a field trip. I have somewhere a photo or two of him in my recliner chair. I never got to his NJ place. I think he was also at Moseley's first UFO conference in NYawk so my coverage of it might mention him. I've his ufo/BF/Fortean books and one or two of his earlier animal books. Have you ever written to the old SITU address in recent years? I've wondered from time to time if that p.o. box # was still good. I do have all the newsletters SITU generated. Just a question of digging them out.

I hope you have been ok given the bad weather I see reported back there. You mentioned scrounging for free wood to save on oil. Hope you got a good supply laid in. The winter here has been mild and basically dry so far. The ski areas are hurting. I got my woodshed filled by early fall. We have a woodstove tho there is an oil burner as backup or for when we have friends visiting who aren't used to waiting for a woodstove to produce heat. My woodshed holds about 7 cords and I've cut and split every bit of it. That's the good exercise for me now that I can't hike 4-5 miles anymore. Two is about the most I can do comfortably.

I do hope you are getting some money for these TV shows you let tape you. You really should open any discussion by noting that this is a sideline for you and you feel strongly that you should be paid for your time and efforts. Get it down in writing on their letterhead that they are going to pay you a flat fee of $ for your consultant work.

Passenger pigeons. I'm no help on that. I grew up being told they were extinct and never saw anything to the contrary for many decades so never developed an interest in the topic. I wish you luck.

28 DECEMBER 2004

I recall hearing about 'Headless Valley' -- maybe there was a ref or two in some fortean pubs but I know nothing of value and doubt that, unless it is in some newsletters or such about which I have forgotten, I have any material on it. Hmmm, I wonder if the B.C. Crypto group has anything on it? Or John Green?

The radio news has been full of the Tsunami tragedy in the Indian Ocean. The forteanesque corner of my mind wonders if any truly weird and unknown life forms got tossed up on the beach. I fear that if so, no one will ever discover them until all that is left is an unrecognizable mess. I used to prowl the beach after a storm at Ocean city MD where we vacationed in the late 30's. Don't recall anything weird being tossed up aside from various forms of seaweed and shells. But I was young then.

Like every other reader of TRUE magazine, I know a bit about Col. Faucet but not all that much. Never pursued that topic. Damn shame there's no master file of TRUE and AGREES. . . lots of interesting stuff in those two.

Now [and it is time I closed this up with a promise I'll try to do better in 2005] In the basement storage room are still unreviewed boxes of clips [mostly ufo] and all sorts of forteanesque stuff. As we've said before, we need to find a responsible institution that will take and catalog all this material. In the meantime

And now I need to go back to my article for UFO mag. It's on the crashed saucer retrieval mythology and may well wind up as a 2-parter as did my earlier report on last summer's MUFON Symposium. Pay is minimal but it is good to have an outlet where I can play Devil's Advocate to uncritical believers.

I hope you had a good Christmas - -- we had a small one. just Margo, me, son David and his wife Angela

And may 2005 be a good year for us all. . with certain exceptions.

Unrated, big-budget sex comedy delivers the goods. Pantsarl plays trader Hornee, who heads Into the African jungle to find his missing daughter (Sills). It's completely nuts.

Biggest role of television is family entertainment in U.S. homes. Here Nick Mercaldi, White Plains, N. Y., tunes his set before semicircle of family, guests.

TELEVISION GOES TO TOWN

In its second year, it has already altered the pattern of U. S. home-life

BY DAN O. GORDON

RADIO BEAM FLASHES through the air and the prosaic living room chair takes on all the hectic glamor of a championship ringside seat, the coveted first-nighter's place at the theater or the participant's view of history in the making. Such is the magic of television.

Exactly where television is going, and how soon it will get there, nobody yet seems to know. But that it is definitely on its way and that 1948 will be by far its biggest year, there is no doubt.

Television today is pretty much confined to parlor entertainment-sports, drama, movies, kids' shows -and perhaps that will always be its greatest function. Young as it is-it reached the public only last year-television already is profoundly influencing the American people. The 8,000 receiving sets in the country at the end of 1946 grew to 170,000 in 12 months, and by next January 1 it is estimated that 750,000 will be in service.

At the beginning of 1948, only 18 television broadcasting stations were in operation, but 56 more had construction permits and 80 additional applications were pending. New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington are linked by coaxial cable. Soon Boston and Schenectady, N. Y., will be added. Separate linking of cities elsewhere in the East and Midwest will increase as an ambitious program of coaxial construction is realized. In perhaps five years coast-to-coast networks will be a casually accepted reality. The most telling effects of television have already been felt in the American home, however. To determine precisely what happens when television invades the U. S. home, PARADE recently went to White Plains, N. Y., to visit the Nicholas Mercaldi family. There PARADE met Mercaldi, 34, a full-faced, pleasant host, head of a newspaper distributing organization; his wife, Louise, and three daughters, Marie, 12, Judy, 9, and Deborah, 10 months. Television's most pronounced effect, the Mercaldis find, is on their children. "They just don't have enough time to watch the screen and do all the other things they used to do," explains Papa Mercaldi. But the influence of television, Mercaldi is quick to affirm, is generally beneficial. "This is especially true from an educational standpoint," he points out. "Both Marie and Judy watch travelogues whenever they are on, and they keep my wife and me busy answering questions about places they have just seen. And their schoolwork hasn't suffered. Their marks are even better."

Youngsters Bring Their Friends

Along with travelogues, the children are keen for movies and kids' programs. Generally they bring home from one to a half-dozen playmates.

To a slightly less degree, television has altered the habits of the elder Mercaldis. They still go to the movies and theater, but, declares Nick, "It's got to be something very good to get us out." A red-hot sports fan, Nick now seldom goes to a fight, insists that he prefers to see it by television.

While they go out less frequently now, the Mercaldis find they entertain at home far more than in pre-television days. When PARADE called, nine guests were in their living room.

The set operates for two or three hours almost every night, and an hour or so in the afternoon with a somewhat heavier schedule on week ends. "It hasn't added anything to our operating budget," says Nick.

"Even the bill for electricity is just about the same."

TELEVISION CONTINUED,

Television set has opened new vistas of entertainment for family. This is Judy, 9.

Neighborhood youngsters warm to excitement of a televised western movie.

Animated cartoons bring smiles to faces of grown-ups and children in living room.

Absorbed youngsters fail to take eyes from screen even when Mrs. Mercaldi brings on cake with chocolate frosting. Children take television dates seriously, are much attracted by travel features, children's dramatic programs and by televised motion pictures.

WHAT MAY THE AMERICAN PUBLIC reasonably near future? For the answer, PA-RADE approached Edgar Bergen, radio star and president, Academy of Television Arts and Sciences;

Leonard Hole, associate director,

CBS Television; and Edward Stash-eff, video program director, WNYE,

New York. Their views follow.

television and will be tion of the future.

Through the use of film, operating costs will be materially lessened because the fees of the nationwide coaxial cables, bringing in live shows, will not be necessary.

The film set-up will operate somewhat as recordings do now on radio. Sponsors will insist on them to insure uniformity and accuracy for the presentation of their products. Each station in a chain broadcasting identical program will be equipped with its own reels of film.

Television fans will be best served by many independent stations throughout the nation rather than great networks. In this-way, more talent will be developed and television will be to the entertainment world of the future what vaudeville-trained performers are to the motion picture and radio world of today.

As soon as possible. I hope to have my own program converted to television, because I believe that even top-notch radio programs cannot compete with the visual appeal of television. To this end, I am working on new puppets designed for the medium of television.

Regional hook-ups are developing along the Eastern seaboard, out of Chicago and on the West Coast. Coast-to-coast spans will come later.

It seems safe to imagine that with various technical improvements already ready on the market, or about to be released from laboratories, there will be considerable improvement in the broadcast image. More and more radio and electronics manufacturers will convert to television production, further, lowering the cost of sets.

The quality of television programming will doubtless increase with the expansion of connecting facilities between cities. This will give great impetus to formation of national networks

Furthermore, although television has managed with enormous ingenuity to grow without benefit of live music since 1945, any arrangement which permits the use of music will tend to improve the entertainment value, not alone of individual programs, but of the over-all schedules of video stations.

powerful influence on American thought and culture is obvious to anyone who has studied, for example, the influence of films on feminine fashions, or the effect of radio on American taste in music. Any medium of mass communication becomes almost automatically an instrument of mass education.

Formal education will come to the home, and perhaps more significant will be the effect on education of having its materials presented to the taxpayer in his living room. The school systems of five large cities already have broadcast on television, not so much for classroom viewers as for the general public. If the material is presented in sufficiently entertaining fashion, the impact of television will make such "teaching" the most effective the world has known.

In the field of political life, interest in sheer subject matter will hold the viewer to the "remote pick-up" of a nominating convention or a campaign speech. And the candidate of tomorrow will need both a good microphone voice and a "telegenic" personality to win his public. No ghost writer can turn out a winning smile. In international politics, television can be a tremendous power for mutual understanding and can readily bridge gaps between nations. In culture and world affairs, we can only hope that television will serve on the side of the angels. THE END.

Any day is sun-day if baby beams over breakfast, lunch and supper. And, thousands of tots do, over and over again, when...

Mothers give up guessing and get Gerber's! You see, babies like good-tasting Gerber's better... from Cereals (usually their first solid food after milk) right through Strained and Junior Foods.

And the Bavor favorites more babies go for are approved by so many doctors, too. That's true of everything from Gerber's tempting, vitamin-full vegetables to delicious, nutritious desserts.

Added note of cheer: Gerber's Junior Foods come in the same size container at the same price as the Strained. And, you don't have to guess how much that lessens leftovers, cuts down grocery bills.

Radio's Most Embarrassing Moments

By J. BRYAN, III

HEY still talk about it at WMCA, although it happened twenty-odd years ago. They say the program was fouled up like a Chinese fire drill and as hideous as Halloween in a mad-house. This name band, they say, was featuring a crooner, a guy with a voice like warm maple sirup. Well, that night, just as he began to pour, his false teeth dropped out, and the maple sirup turned to pickle juice. The trombonist, nervous anyhow, blew a clinker that rattled teacups in China. That touched off the rest of the boys; the notes they hit Bounded like a pack of taxi drivers in a traffic jam. The leader backed away in fright and fell over a chair. The announcer bleated, "I'll be damned!" right into his mike. The assistant announcer just stood there with his face hanging out. And the whole studio was going nuts, but fast, when the sound man gathered his wits and-"Voom! We cut to the piano."

If a newspaper accidentally refers to a local hero as a bottle-scarred veteran," it can change "bottle" to "battle" in the next edition, and little harm is done. If Royal, the wonder horse, gets a sore at Tex Podner and prints a pair of horseshoes on his pants, they throw away that part of the film, and the fans don't know the difference. But radio and television Were you listening in when a vocalist was introduced as a charming young sinner"? Or when a commentator described "the Battle of the Bulgarian Belch? Here are radio's most hilarious slips of the tongue. have no such protection. The burp, the brodie and the unbuttoned button are irretrievable; and once a train of disaster starts rolling, as on that night at WMCA, the studio can derail it only by blanking out the rest of the program and switching to a stand-by pianist.

Real emergencies are rare, but every studio can produce a list of minor mishaps as long as a soap commercial. Almost anything can cause one. The sound-effects man rings a church bell instead of opening a creaky door. The script writer-as once on The Lone Ranger program-feeds in a line like "Hark! I hear a white horse coming!" Westbrook Van Voorhees, running a Mutual show for a cigarette company, coughs in front of the microphone and apologizes, "Excuse me' I've been smoking too much." A WRNB announcer shocks his audience with a shameless impropriety. "For a happy vacation, never swim or bathe alone!"

Those are the commonest mistakes-plain slips of the tongue. Listen to Jerry Lawrence: "You will know that the King and Queen have arrived when you hear the twenty-one-sun galoot.

And Arthur van Horne: "WOR presents the newted nose analyst

And Mel Allen: "It's amipe-poking time!"

And Bruce Elliott: "The urge is needent!"

And Frank Knight: "The weather report: tomorrow rowdy, followed by clain." (At that, he made a better point than the announcer who prophesied. "Clear Sunday, followed by Monday late tonight.")

Even a thick-witted child could prattle the simple phrases that foiled these radio veterans, but the gremlins that live in microphones don't bother to twist a child's tongue. They're after big game-the crack announcers, the star actors, the deep-domed commentators-and the gremlins never miss. When they got a preview of a script and learn that a dignitary will be mentioned, they cover every syllable of his name with banana peels. Thus, Art Whiteside incredulously heard himself introduce "the Brown Quince of Norway," and Lowell Thomas, having referred to "Ambassador Bull Billett," turned with relief to a dispatch from New Delhi, India, with late news of "Sir Stifford Crapps." Harry von Zell paid respectful tribute to "our great President, Hoobert Heever," but Clyde Kittell topped him with an announcement that "His Holiness, Pipe Poons" would speak "from you to Vatican City."

Such double slips are collectors' items, and Kittell wore the Order of the Twisted Tonsil for years, until Dick Burr won it away from him with "Shores of skulls were fired in a bittle batter." This may have been the same battle in which the Royal Air Force dropped, according to another announcer, "two- and four-ton blondes," or possibly it was what a third commentator called "the Battle of the Bulgarian Belch."

If the gremlins won't respect even the Pope and ex-President Hoover, it's no surprise that they are downright frivolous with the companies that sponsor the programs. The Great Atlantic and Pacific Ten Company seems to invite their special displeasure. Milton Cross once called its orchestra "the A. & G Pipsies." and Ken Allyn informed his listeners that "all these values are waiting at your nearest A. & Poo Feed Store." The late Graham McNamee once plugged "Fire Chief (insoloon," but Dick Willard perhaps fresh from a traffic accident-swore by gas sold "at the sign of the Flying Red Hearse."

André Baruch advised his audience to "demand the breast in bed," but Fred Uttal offered an even more extraordinary prospect. "I am here," he stated stoutly. "to introduce Buppert's Rear"

Henring him, certain listeners were reminded of the announcer at WWJ who sing the virtues of "Hands' Hind Cream."

Grammarians have a term for such slips as these—metathesis, which means the transposition of letters, sounds or syllables. The word "curly" was "cruille" before metathesis, "third" was "thridde," and boisterous Sir John Falstaff was originally Fastolph. When the metathesis is accidental and ridiculous, it is known as a spoonerism, in tribute to its most famous practitioner, the Rev. William Archibald Spooner, late warden of New College, Oxford. Doctor Spooner seldom got any phrase quite straight. He once complained that a certain undergraduate had repeatedly "hissed my mystery lectures." Again, he whispered to a bewildered lady in the college chapel, "Mardon me, padam, but you are occupew. ing my pie." And on another Sunday he announced from his pulpit that the next hymn would be, "Kinquering Congs Their Titles Tuke."

JARRA KERES

Even Milton Cross stumbled once in introducing "Arusco Turanini—that is, Toscuero Arlanini."

LARRY KENHOES

Ben Grauer shows how he felt the day he signed off a show with "This is WJZilch, New York."

Doctor Spooner died in 1930, age eighty-six, but until the last microphone withers on its chromium stalk, his memory will be green Parix green or the green of poison ivy. One radio actor, renching for an imaginary hell pull and explaining that he would "give the bull a pill." came offstage with a hot-headed suggestion.

"I'm going to buy derby." he said, "an old-fashioned one with a square crown, the kind I imagine Spooner wore. I'm going to have his initials stamped to the sweatband in gold. 'W.A. 9.' I'll bring it to the studio every time I'm on the air, and if I so much as sht to shuffle syllables, I'll kick that dann derby into the luck row of the audience"

Radio veterans all agree that when a spoonerism Trips you when, as they say, you pull a fluff" for nfumpf" or a "beard" you should pick yourself up and rush on us if nothing had happened Chances are, few listeners will notice the slip Ford Bond cies in evidence the time when he offered "a gold-edged hostes dish, absolutely free, as beautiful us it In less the audience response was higher than when he made the offer correctly. Besides, the veterans say if you go back and try to clean up the meses, you're likely to make it worke

For instance, there was the CHS actor who was giving directions for setting a dinner table: "Place the sporks and foons on "Pause "The porks and sfoons "Another pause Deep breath. I mean, of course, the forks and poons" And so on. unto hysteria

Ken Allyn once tried to announce that WRNI. would sponsor a monster citizenship rally. "Sponster a monsor" was his first attempt, and "monster sponsor" his second When he finally straightened it out, he was so flushed with success that he forgot all about the rally and left his audience believing that WRNI. was going to sponsor a monster.

Even Milton Cross, who usually seems to have gargled with valla extract and brushed his teeth with marshmallow whip, sounded as if his mouth were stuffed with peanut shells when he said that The new NBC Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of "Atrosco Turanm-that is. Toscuo Ar tanim He wiped his forehead and read it xyl-lable by syllable Ar-tu-ro Tos-cn-mi-ni

Speaking of brushing one's teeth, Bob Hope tried To offer his audience a "fifty-tuft toothbrush," but abandoned the whole project after minutes of fumliling with faltytiths and tuft brushes.

The toughest obstacle course in Ben Grauer's long experience was-rend it aloud yourself-"S.x hundred Agfn-Ansco D-Six Continued unther 1, twenty times before he went on the air, and when the moment came, he closed his eyes, prayed, and trilled it letter perfect-only to sign off with,

"This is WJZilch, New York."

Floyd Neale once ended a WOR program with, "This is the Musical Broadcasting System," and André Baruch, also broadcasting for Mutual, signed off, "This is the Columbia Broadcasting System." Phillips Carlin, Mutual's vice-president in charge of programs, sent CBS a bill for $1100 for the ad.
You can't believe that an announcer could foul up the name of his employer?
Why, they've been known to foul up their own names! Sterling North, the New York Post's literary critic and the arbiter of WHN's Books on Trial, bade farewell with "This is Sterling Night, saying good north and pleasant reading." Johnnie Johnston opened a program thus: "Good afternoon, ladies and Johnston," and Fred Hoey addressed himself to an even narrower group, "Good afternoon, Fred Hoey. This is everybody speaking." But it remained for Baruch to tangle a line than any novice fisherman, "Good ladies, evening and gentlemen of the audio radiance!" worse

Baruch pulled that king-size fluff in 1935, but he kept his crown only until February, 1936, when he had to abdicate in favor of Mayor George W. Freyermuth, of South Bend, Indiana. The occasion was the eighty-fourth birthday of the Studebaker Company, and Mayor Freyermuth was the guest of honor. The week before, speaking extemporaneously at a Notre Dame football banquet, he had dreamily focused his compliments on the baseball team; so Jim Britt, in charge of the Studebaker broadcast, tried to argue him into writing out his speech as a protection against another slip. The mayor refused; he knew what to say - done it many times before; just leave it to him. Britt left it, helplessly, and heard him tell a coast-to-coast audience, "Studebaker, I congratulate you! For eighty-four years you have been turning out a product equal to few and superior to none.'

Some fluffs make grotesque sense and even give a glimpse of an enchanting vista, as when David Ross recommended a new "mouse wash" or when Ralph Edwards presented "a charming young sinner." It is true that Freddy Martin's orchestra used to play at the Hotel Bossert's Marine Roof not its Maroon Reef, as Baruch said- but there is something attractively languid and surrealistically bizarre about a maroon reef.

When a statesman declared that he was "unaccustomed to public speak-easies," doubtless it reassured the drys in his constituency; and ex-G. I.'s were patient, though puzzled, when a spokesman for the Veterans Administration warned them that requests should be sent only by "indignant veterans who can prove fifty per cent desirability.' As Doctor Spooner might have put it, Jim Britt was "in the right perch, but the wrong chew," that night in 1941 when, summarizing the day's football games, he said, "Notre Dame seven, Northwestern six, and once again the Fighting Irish have eked out victory by a narrow virgin." The same young lady intruded on Jimmy Wallington, but in a context that made him seem indelicate and presumptive." .He had come to the end of a program in the Famous Romances series. The Wedding March throbbed and faded. (Continued on Page 69)

And Wallington spoke through happy tears, "So ends another virgin
There are plenty of instances in which an announcer trips along his verbal tightrope with perfect grace and balance, only to find that it has suddenly forked and left him straddling an absurd ambiguity. Byrum Saam, broadcasting from Shibe Park in Philadelphia, watched a long fly soar into left field. Bob Johnson is hacking up for the bill," he reported. "Back-way hack...he hits his head against the wall, lrops it, picks it up and pegs it home" A dozen letters asked Snam whether Johnson's head reached hone en the fly or on first bounce.
A studio announcer at another Pennsylvania station once put a colleague on the air with an unintended sneer, "And now we bring you the dope from the ball parks, Doug Arthur." On a program called The Wife Saver, Allen Prescott offered a recipe for "two people to be cooked in a chafing dish." A wartime British visitor told a CBS audience that, in England, "most men believe that the war will last longer than women." Another (BS audience was warned. "Soot in chimneys is frequently the cause of fire in the home.

Why take a chance with your wife and children? Have a fire inspector check them every three months" And "children" recalls the grisly dietitian who THE SATURDAY EVENING POST remarked, "A lot of things you are supposed to eat, you just don't like, especially children."

Mispronunciations are not always the announcer's fault alone. Suppose you were shown the printed word "lead"; without a context, you wouldn't know whether to read it "leed" or "led." Such words-identical in spelling, but different in pronunciation-are called homographs. A Boston announcer with no time to study uscript found himself confronted with a choice of homographs in the title, The Babe in the Manger. The fact that it was Christ mast ide should have helped him, but it didn't. He pronounced the last word not "manjer" but "manger," in the innocent belief that the scene would be Boston's famous Hotel Manger.

The 1948 presidential campaign yielded a humper crop of fluffs, Presi- ! dent Truman harvested the first of them at the Jackson Day dinner, when I he referred to "those great Democrats, Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt." Then Attorney General Clark; introduced Truman at Dallas as "the man who stopped Joe Louis in the Federal courts," and Governor Dull, of Pennsylvania, introduced Governor Warren, of California, as "the next President of the United States." A Julesburg. Colorado, Dewey told a back-platform crowd, "It's great to be in Denver!" and at Truckee, California, Truman urged the people of "-ér-this place" to get out and vote for him.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST
A CBS commentator wrote an appropriate curtain line to the long comedy of errors: "Dowey has just conceded the election to President Roosevelt."
Maybe the heat of the campaign kept their brains at a soft boil, and maybe the pressure of State Department work had addled Joseph C. Grew's pate when he spoke at that Red Cross luncheon in Washington. His theme was selflessness. To illustrate it, he told how General Marshall, between an exhausting trip to China and an impending one to Europe, had taken time to address the Sunday meeting that had opened the Red Cross campaign, although he had long been looking forward-so Mr. Grew said "to a week end in the country with Mrs. Eisenhower."
The explosion of laughter woke Mr. Grew to his slip, which was made even more embarrassing by the presence of Mrs. Eisenhower herself. He begged her, "Please forgive me and please apologize to the General for me!"
She choked back her own laughter long enough to ask, "Which General?"
As absent-minded as Mr. Grew, a sports announcer at WTCN became so enthralled by a furious boxing match that he momentarily forgot his audience and remembered it only at the last split second before disaster: "The Kid lands a left and a right and another right! Rocco is groggy! The Kid hits him with a left hook, and there goes an uppercut! It catches Rocco on the button and knocks him flat on-
He stopped short and began again, trembling: "That is, Rocco is now in a sitting position."
Quick wits saved another sports announcer, broadcasting a University of Pennsylvania football game. "Franny Murray takes the ball," he was saying. "He crosses the thirty-five, the forty "That's not Murray," his assistant whispered. "It's Elverson."

But nothing, not even suicide, could have saved Ralph Edwards, of WBBM.

Buttonholing passers-by to be interviewed for his man-in-the-street program, he spied a pretty girl, thrust her the microphone and asked, "First of all, miss, what is your business?"

"I'm a streetwalker," she said. Next question?

Get a guest on a program-especially an impromptu guest-and you've got trouble. For instance, the Henry Morgan show, sponsored by a razor manufacturer, featured a speed-shaving contest in which one afternoon's winner was an Army private.

Morgan congratulated him and, setting up a plug, asked, "How does your face feel?"

Said the private, "Bloody!"

Emotionally, Mary Margaret McBride has developed the shoulders of an Atlas from carrying loads of guest grief. Queena Mario was telling her about the rigors of an opera star's career: regular hours, long practice, strict diet.

"Diet?" Miss McBride asked. "That means lots of vegetables doesn't it?"

"Of course.

"Broccoli?" she suggested, mindful that one of her sponsors was a broccoli distributor.

Miss Mario shuddered. "I loathe the stuff!"

Another guest was Florence Reed, the actress, and another sponsor was a citrus-fruit grower. Miss McBride was thymning the lusciousness of baked grapefruit when Miss Reed suddenly boomed, "I never heard of anything so ghastly!"

Miss McBride has. She once heard herself say something even ghastlier. She had thought she was making a million mouths water over Cushman's cakes when she realized that she was actually praising Schrafft, a rival.

Lou Gehrig fumbled one of those, to let a rival score. Ford Bond had him as a guest on a program about Huskies, the breakfast cereal, and Gehrig played airtight ball right up to Bond's key question, "What is your favorite breakfast, taken with cream, sugar and some sort of fruit?"

Lou's answer was clear and confident:

"Why, I always start the day with a great big bowl of Wheaties."

Wheaties! Horror-struck, he jumped away from the mike, ran twenty-five feet, threw his script on the floor and stood there sweating. He returned his check to Geijeral Foods, the sponsor, but the story hit the front pages next morning, and the check came back doubled.

Another ballplayer once disrupted another breakfast cereal program-not by inadvertence, though; by plain mischief. It was Boota Poffenberger, a Dodger, of course The key question was the same as Lou's, and Boots' answer was just as clear: "Ham, eggs and a couple of bottles of beer!"

Many such guests-frank, forgetful or frisky-have outraged radio's staid studios-calling Doctor Spooner!-

but when historians of the industry gather, the guest that memory conjures first, in a hot, unholy light, is Uncle Charlie.

The scene was Richmond, Virginia. The time was August, 1932. And the occasion was a reunion of Confederate veterans, which NBC was covering. Wade Arnold, in charge of the program, had interviewed a dozen old boys beforehand, among them Uncle Charlie, a nimble nonagenarian from New Orleans. His gray uniform was clean and neatly pressed, but it had the greenish patina of great age, and when Arnold asked about it, Uncle Charlie proudly admitted that his "Maw" had made it for him herself, just before he "joined Gen'l Beauregard." Arnold liked that. There could be no script for Uncle Charlie because he had never April 23, 1919 learned to read, but Arnold and the announcer rehearsed him in his little speech, and the broadcast began. The opening number was a rendition of the Rebel Yell by the entire company. Old Captain Culpeper-or perhaps it was Major Dinwiddie-put his heart into it with such gusto that his suspenders broke and his pants fell down. Then Corporal Fairfax-or perhaps Colonel Randolph-was asked if he had a message for the audience. His script called for him to answer, "Yes, if you'll be so indulgent," but his dim old eyes read it as "so indignant." Finally it was Uncle Charlie's turn. The announcer described his uniform and invited him to tell its story.

"Nemmine mah close," said Uncle Charlie. "Ah'll tell you-all sump'n 'bout women's close."

The announcer blanched and began to babble, "Later-delighted, of course...your uniform, though won't you

But Uncle Charlie had the bit in his teeth, and away he went. "They's a Hcandal, that's what! Ah mean short skirts. No matter wheh you go- on the street, in the theayter, in the spo'tin'

house

Yes, yes!" the announcer cried.

"Thank you, Uncle Charlie! Thank you very much indeed! And now, ladies and gentlemen"

Still, neither the gremlins in charge of garbling, nor the gremlins of grammar, not even the demoniac gremlins who speak through a guest's mouth. can quite match the genius for chaos of the gremlins who play among the knobs and switches of a control board.

A sports announcer was broadcasting a boxing match when his studio cut him off with a bulletin on the mayor's sudden death, then cut him back in. Unaware of the interpolation, he continued briskly, "That sounded like quite a blow, but it doesn't mean a thing. really. No damage done at all."

Back in the '30's, Ford Bond was running a remote pick-up debate on Prohibition. A wet congressman spoke first, from New York; then Bond announced, "And now, for the dry side of the question, we switch to Washington and Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the W.C.T.U. Come in, Washington"" What came in was a frivolous, boozy song:

I got the blues!

I got the blues!

I got the al-co-hah-ol-lic blues!

Master control had switched not to Washington, but to the Eddie Cantor show in Chicago.

Ben Grauer, though, was the victim of an ordeal that made Bond's seem a mere mosquito bite. All networks were linked for a broadcast by the Pope promptly at 11:04 on a Sunday morning. He would speak from Vatican City. of course, but would be relayed by the more powerful station at Geneva. On the nick of eleven, Grauer leaned toward his microphone. He described the nation-wide hook-up, emphasized the importance of the speech, and ended.

"We take you now to Vatican City.

The next voice you hear will be that of His Holiness, Pope Pius."

The next voice they heard was singing, "I'll be glad when you're dead, you rascal you!"

Geneva had misread the timetable and was testing with a Cab Calloway record.

Later, someone asked Grauer, "What did you do, Bon?"

"What did I do? What could I do?"

Voom! We cut to the piano.'

RADIO-TELEVISION

Cornycopia Jones

To most big-city Americans, Spike Jones is the silly fellow who louses up music like "Cocktails for Two," "Chloe," and the "William Tell Overture" for the greater hilarity of the record business and radio (CBS, Saturday, 7-7:30 p.m. EST). To an ever-widening group of hinterlanders, however, Jones is the master mind of the Musical Depreciation Revue, a radio program and a traveling stage show that combines both the good and bad elements of a night with Olsen and Johnson, a wild Fourth of July, and a formal concert-liberally sprinkled with Jones pure-grade corn. Playing each audience against itself--radio, records, and revue-Jones has tightly tied down the King of Corn title.

Until 1942 Lindley Armstrong Jones was an obscure drummer, distinguished only by a jutting jaw which underscored a sad, rather rubbery face. For his own amusement he organized the City Slickers, dedicated to wringing musical parodies out of pistol shots, garbage cans, and cowbells. The music world was coldly unimpressed, until Jones hustled up for RCA Victor a record called "Der Führer's Face." Within 48 hours after its release on Sept. 11, 1942, Jones was on his way to the top of the cornstalk.

For three years the City Slickers toured the theaters, playing five and six shows a day as part of a vaudeville bill, until Jones set up the Revue, a two-and-a-half-hour show with a $1.20 to $3.60 ticket range. Eighteen months ago Coca-Cola bought a refined version of the Revue for the radio audience.

Traveling Freaks: The Revue travels in two Pullman cars and a 70-foot baggage car, bossed by a patient man aptly named Ralph Wonders. While Jones sits in his drawing room thinking up new gimmicks like slot machines that explode on key (at $6 a boom), parachuting stuffed ducks, and harmonized automobile horns, Wonders serves business manager, keeper of accounts, and counselor to the troupe of 41.

Account keeping is almost a full-time job. For, sold out 99 per cent of the time. the Revue is grossing Jones about $25,-750 a week-less operating expenses of [AD] $10,000 to $11,000. In addition there are the printed programs, sold by a 7-Spike Jones (low man and Slickers: Fire is withheld during childbirth Purv Pullin) is around with a variety of eight human voices, 85 animal sounds, 125 birdcalls, and a rare ability at blowing bubble gum.

Last week the company spent a rushed week end in New York-between Newark and White Plains engagements-and cut two transcribed radio programs for Coca-Cola. This week the show is heading West-where anything can happen, as it did once in Detroit where a fan had a baby during the show. Respectfully, Jones cut down on the pistol shots until mother and child were removed to safety.

foot-7-inch giant and a pint-sized midget, Progress in Kinescope at 50 cents apiece. They cost Jones 14 cents each.

While Jones is a sobersided man, giving the impression that all this is somewhat beyond endurance, he has surrounded himself with a rare collection of jugglers, acrobatic dancers, and other freaks. "Doodles" Weaver, whose wackiness is consistent both off and on stage, serves as a singer, mugger, and blackout specialist. Dr. Horatio Q. Birdbath (born 54

Little more than a year ago, faced with the problem of supplying programs to the burgeoning TV stations outside the range of coaxial cables, the networks set to developing a device for filming a live television show as it comes over the receiver. Called kinescope recordings by NBC and CBS, video recordings by ABC, and tele-transcriptions by DuMont, the films of top New York-produced programs now are showing up in far-distant places like Salt Lake City, Albuquerque, and Seattle within a week or two after their original telecast. Special events, such as the inauguration, are speeded to stations as fast as planes can carry them.

In New York last week NBC assembled the press to show off its kinescopic achievements. The equipment is tricky and expensive (NBC has just spent [AD] $250,000 on a new outfit including four cameras). In spite of constant experimentation, the quality of a kinescoped show is still beneath that of a live program. But to remote stations the recordings mean good video, to the advertisers, a national market; and to the networks, an otherwise impossible number of affiliates. This year the industry will kinescope some 2,000 hours of programs-or about four times the total footage turned out in 1948 by Hollywood's major studios. Zenith or Nadir?

The Zenith Radio Corp. last week felt the prick of its own needling. Since March 6 it has been filling the nation's papers with full-page ads proclaiming the Zenith television set as the only one that will not become obsolete when the Federal Communications Commission changes present channel allocation (NEWSWEEK, March 21). At the same time the inf.unt and wobbly television market has been affected by misunderstood statements from the FCC But the big manufacturers like Philco and the Radio Corp. of America, with plunging radio sales to be steadied, have taken the onslaught in seething silence, leaving the yelling to the littler fellows. On March 22 two of the littler fellows filed a joint suit in New York Supreme Court, asking $1,000,000 damages from Zenith.

Sightmaster Corp., a manufacturer of TV sets, and the Empire Coil Co., Inc., a component parts maker, found the ads "false and misleading," full of representations that were made "maliciously." As a result of the ads, the suit went on, both Sightmaster and Empire had lost sales and consequent revenue. In asking the court to make good the losses, Sightmaster and Empire were in effect trying to make Zenith put up or shut up.

To FCC Chairman Wayne Coy, whose original statements inspired Zenith's ads, the whole obsolescence issue was "something of a tempest in a teapot." On March 23 in a speech to the Baltimore Advertising Club, Coy tried to set the record straight with the plainest words he knew. No matter what the commission does in the way of changing allocations, Coy said, "the problem of obsolescence will be a relatively minor one. . . If I lived in Baltimore [which currently has three TV stations] I would have no hesitancy today in buying a television receiver." Newsweek, April 4, 1949

Whodunit?

The redhead in Apartment 1-A was strangled first. Then the redhead in 2-B and the one in 3-C got theirs. All died at the hands of "The Creeper. a sinister, unseen character in last week's Suspense play over CBS television. But after the murder of Georgia, the redhead who lived in 4-1), Georgia came back to haunt her scripters and the network.

Since network television rules forbid any act of violence to be shown (after all, Greek tragedy had the same convention), Georgia was done in just offscreen. A man's voice murmured: "What nice lipstick you use..." Georgia shrieked and dropped the phone she was using. The camera panned blankly at the phone while the dirty work was done.

Minutes after Suspense was officially ended, Georgia was on the haunt. In all, more than 2,500 phone calls jammed CBS's Manhattan switchboard. Everyone had the same reasonable question: Whodunit? Apparently the scripters thought they had made it plain: "The Creeper" was the locksmith who had just come to fix Georgia's front door. Why, then, had the TV audience been confused

The answer. CBS finally decided, was that most people tend to retain what they see more readily than what they hear.

Television, which demands closer visual attention than the ordinary, unselected sights of everyday life, closer even than movies, may exaggerate this tendency. The TV audience had not seen the locksmith, but had heard him speak several times during the play. Yet, reasons CBS, the audience was looking so hard that it forgot to listen, and could not place the murderer's voice. Later that night CBS was forced to telecast a "news bulletin" announcing the identity of the killer. The incident held a lesson for television: tell it through the vision. It was a lesson that radio-trained telecasters badly needed. If they learned it, red-haired Georgia did not die in vain.

THE STORY OF

BOSTON'S FAMED

Travelers Tale

House

With the exception of the years during which the now practically extinct sellers' market prevailed, once every month, John Constant Traveler, salesman for All American Business Corporation, has visited Boston. His method of transportation varies between bus, car, train or plane, but his destination, as in pre-war years, continues to be Boston's Parker House.

BOSTON'S FAMED PARKER HOUSE

John Constant Traveler's Boston Home

No fool, John Constant Traveler has more tangible reasons than the room clerk's smile for his continued patronage of the Parker House. His business takes him to department stores, wholesalo houses, industrial firms, insurance companies. From the Parker House he reaches them all within a few minutes. At night, the theatre district and moving picture houses are just a short walk away. John Traveler has found that famed Parker House hospitality, accommodations and food are no empty words....his room is attractive, cheerful; his bed is soft, comfortable, his private bathroom has combination tub and shower, large fluffy absorbent towels. Circulating ice water flows from the tap and there is a four station radio right at his bedside. Although he dines most often in the popular price Revere Room, where speedy service is the watchword, he entertains customers and friends in the beautiful main dining room or clubby Colonial Grill Room.

When travelers or young salesmen planning their first visits to Boston ask John Constant Traveler's advice as to where they should stay, is it any wonder that his unhesitating, emphatic recommendation is always "The Parker House of course"!

*Rooms begin at $4.50. All have circulating ice-water, bath, 4-network radio.
